Join us in Learning About Creation in Our Local Forests

The Southern California Forests Campaign brings people together to protect the four national forests of Southern California—the Angeles, Cleveland, Los Padres and San Bernardino. To do this we are reaching out to communities of faith who believe that our local forests are important spiritual places.

Faith communities bear witness to a deep reverence and respect for creation. That's why we are offering a new program to you—Caring for Creation. The program introduces families to the beautiful mountains of our local forests. We do this through forests presentations, sharing of scriptures, meditative walks, hikes, and service projects.

Caring for Creation is designed to help people of faith further their spiritual journeys. We offer the program to all faith groups and can adapt it according to the needs and interests of your community. We offer the program without charge. If you or your congregation are interested in being part of this program contact Juana Torres at 213.387.6528 x 226 or juana.torres@sierraclub.org.

“The presentation we heard about the forests gave my church the opportunity to join with our boyscouts, families and community to learn about the local forest area and how we are called to be stewards of God’s creation”
