Subject Line: Don't Roll Back Climate Transparency for Investors (File No. S7-2026-19)

Dear Secretary Countryman,

I am writing to express my formal opposition to the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposal to rescind the Climate-Related Disclosure Rule.

The SEC's core mission is to protect investors, maintain fair and orderly markets, and facilitate capital formation. That mission depends on ensuring that investors have access to more material information, not less. Rescinding the Climate-Related Disclosure Rule would set our markets back by making it harder for investors to understand how companies manage significant financial risks.

Without standardized disclosures, investors are left to piece together information from inconsistent voluntary reports and incomplete public statements. This makes it more difficult to compare companies, evaluate long-term risks, and allocate capital efficiently. Greater transparency strengthens markets; weaker disclosure increases uncertainty.

Climate-related financial risks are not hypothetical. They are already affecting corporate operations, infrastructure, supply chains, insurance markets, and asset values across the economy. Companies increasingly acknowledge these risks in their own public communications, and many investors already incorporate climate risk into their investment decisions. A consistent disclosure framework simply helps ensure that this information is reliable, comparable, and available to all investors – not only those with the resources to conduct extensive private analysis.

Rescinding the rule would reduce transparency precisely when investors need better information to navigate growing climate-related financial risks. Investors cannot make informed decisions if material risks remain hidden or are disclosed inconsistently.

I respectfully urge the Commission to uphold its responsibility to protect investors and promote transparent, efficient markets by withdrawing the proposed rescission and preserving standardized climate-related disclosures.

Thank you for considering my comments.

...obviously this summer of floods, fires, and heat show that the drive of human economics bothers our culture. We must realize each decision affects our lives.

2. Mary Farivari

A company climate risk is important information that should be transparent for investors. Especially for the individual investor, such as myself.

Actions deserve consequences. Especial actions that hurt people, environment, and planet. Taking responsibility may be old-fashioned, but it is the correct path to take.

4. Karen Gerst

Burbank, CA 91505

After LA's terrible fires destroyed entire neighborhoods, we are seeing how so much loss is affecting the insurance industry -- overwhelmed by the amount of claims. This is just one example of how climate change and the catastrophes it has and will cause trickles down into different markets. We need to know if companies that contribute to climate pollution are taking steps to reduce their emissions that lead to the hazardous conditions -- fires, flooding, hurricanes, tornadoes, heat waves -- that affect our communities and the future wellbeing of generations to come.

5. Jill Martel

All areas of our great country, and the world, are experiencing devastating changes related to climate related issues. Please help protect us from climate change.

6. Ed Harker

America = free and open; Open = transparent; "rolling back a rule that requires the largest companies to publicly report their climate pollution and disclose plans to reduce their emissions" = not transparent; SEC proposed rule is absolutely UNAmerican!

7. Linda Carroll

Americans suffer the ill effects of pollution caused by corporations and have a right to have complete information about it.

Anthropogenic Global Heating is only getting much worse! Every single one of the last 20 years is on the list of the Hottest Years Ever on Earth! Have you checked what has been happening in the European Union? More than 200,000 People have died from Excessive Heat over the last 4 years! AND at least 20 people have drowned trying to cool off this year alone!

9. Katherine Reeve

As a 72 year old retired librarian and grandmother, I need to know my investments are not going to companies contributing to climate change. It seems a simple thing to let the public know where a company stands in terms of supporting projects which will help the climate, or in standing with those who are destroying the planet.

As a geoscientist, I have studied the effects of greenhouse gas emissions on our environment and therefore our health. Continued emissions will lead to further warming, and the #1 weather related cause of death in the US is heat. Excessive pollution also brings about poor air quality, which has negative consequences for our health. Companies that pollute the most need to be held accountable for their pollution, and we should push them to pollute less and be transparent about their emissions.

12. Leanne Blind-Doskocil

Valparaiso,IN 46383

As a meteorologist, I know how hazardous weather is being shaped by a warming climate, and these events will only get worse at our current rate of warming! Investors need to understand how these hazards will impact their markets, and I urge you to be transparent about this and do what is right for everyday Americans by not rescinding this rule.

13. Juli Kring

As a mother and a grandmother, I am very concerned for the health and viability of the planet our children and future generations will inherit. We have a duty to our communities, families and most importantly, children to ensure their safety and well being through environmentally sound and sustainable policies, including clean air, water, addressing climate change, etc. That duty will always be more important than politics or profit.

21. Stephen Price

Milwaukee,WI 53211

As I write, Wisconsin has been suffering the worst air pollution ever recorded, due to 2000+ wildfires in Canada and the U.S.. It also has been having many days in the high 90s F. And severe drought of weeks. These are all effects of deadly climate change, since they continue trends of past decades and centuries. It is unconscionable and self destructive to allow corporations to avoid acknowledging their own contribution to climate disaster and to be silent about any plans to address goals in their own operations. We all MUST do our part to stop this catastrophe! Thus:

22. Julie Pierce

Climate change is already impacting financial markets, whether the Trump administrations wants to acknowledge that or not. However, rescinding this rule would make it much, much easier for the negative impacts of climate change to impact investors like myself without my realizing it until the harm has already been done. Financial management is tricky enough in this day and age, and requiring financial institutions to disclose how they're managing climate-related risks is one thing that makes the whole process easier. Please preserve the Climate-Related Disclosure Rule.

31. Eric Hintsa

Educated people know anthropogenic climate change is real. Because educated people are often financially successful, they invest in companies by buying stock. If they are not conservative (eg., greedy, selfish, uncompassionate to their fellow man), they want to invest in companies that are not profiting from economic and environmental rape in pursuit of profits. Removing these requirements will handicap honest, society-serving companies in the capital markets, in favor of the soulless rip-off artists.

I try to be mindful of my environmental impact - reusable water bottle and containers whenever possible, line drying clothes instead of using a gas dryer, keeping my thermostat at a reasonable level, walking when I can, composting, collecting rain water, etc. Meanwhile large corporations are contributing so much to our carbon footprint in the pursuit of profits. Please make them accountable for their impact.

I've already written about this matter before, but it matters very much to me. This humid, polluted summer with its wilfires and bad air has brought the negative impact of climate change home to many of us, including me, and I think investors need material information about what companies are and aren't doing to mitigate or prevent worse conditions than this in the future! It is critical to recognize the links between climate risk and financial risk in order to protect my savings as well as all Americans. The planet is heating up, flooding is happening in places never seen before, and more and more problems due to a rapidly changing climate are occurring. It is therefore essential that the SEC maintain its focus on holding corporate polluters responsible for their actions. Requiring transparency is only the first step but critical for further, more robust action to follow.

Rescinding the Climate-Related Disclosure rule would have a significantly negative impact on our ability to discern corporate stewards from irresponsible polluters. It would be a real shame. Transparency is essential and a cornerstone of our free country and economy. Do not remove the protections that preserve our ability to choose right from wrong. Retirement brings enough challenges to seniors as it is. What we don't need are any more surprises designed to chip away at our money. This is a very stressful time to cope with, so please do not allow us to be exposed to the vulnerability of further financial risk. Personally, I spend a great deal of time signing petitions, writing letters, and fighting for what little freedoms we have left. It is sad to me that we cannot enjoy this time of our lives, as everyone is constantly raining our parade so-to-speak, threatening us financially, and otherwise making our lives extremely uncomfortable. I know I'm beyond weary from fighting for our rights, so I can only imagine that others are feeling the same. I just happen to be one of those American citizens who stands up for what I believe is right. Please consider how you would wish to be treated in this respect. The SEC must acknowledge that climate risk is financial risk and it's job is to protect everyday people's savings, not corporate polluters.

307. Nancy Paricio

Buena Vista,CO 81211

The smoke coming from Canada and the western part of the US, where I live, should be reason enough for you to come to the conclusion that we all, buy especially you in your national government roles, need to both acknowledge that climate change is drastically affecting our lives and economy. You have the power and responsibility to help stop this destruction of our planet. If you change this rule, what is happening now will only worsen. Eventually you will pay the price with your health, as we all will for your decisions now. Yes, the future is in your hands. Will we be able to breathe outside in the future? I hope and pray that you make the right choice for all of us, not for money.

308. James Floyd

372. Katherine Plosky

Winchester,MA 01890

When considering the financial prospects of the future, it is impossible not to include the added risks of climate change. The costs of managing heat and drought add immense financial burden to both individuals and municipalities. Additionally, the increased likelihood of natural disasters such as storms, floods, and fires means that we will be spending more on disaster relief in the future. All this adds up to the fact that the SEC cannot allow companies to hide their impacts on climate change. The public needs to see what companies are doing in order to prepare themselves for the future. In addition, this would allow for people to choose which companies to support based on how much they are trying to protect our planet. Please defend transparency and protect our right to corporate accountability.

373. Ray Barry

Lexington,KY 40513

When I make investments, I want full disclosure of the risks I am taking and the affects of what my investments are doing. Hiding climate related activities gives a free pass to corporations to destroy the planet. With no accountability for their actions, operating in secret, gives corporations super-citizen status. But people are more important than corporations. To believe otherwise is to have lost your soul.
