Comments on S7-10-22 Climate-Related Disclosures for Investors

To whom it may concern,

Attached are the signatures and comments of 14,954 individuals who signed onto the following statement through the Sierra Club.

The Securities and Exchange Commission's new draft rule for climate risk disclosure is a critical step in fulfilling its mandate to protect investors and capital markets. Far too many corporations do not disclose the climate risks they face, and they make climate-related commitments without disclosing information investors need to verify that they are living up to those commitments. Without this disclosure, investors cannot tell if companies will continue to be profitable and resilient as the economy transitions to clean energy. This is unfair to countless individuals like me who need to protect our savings for the long term.

By setting a clear standard for businesses to disclose data about their preparations for the shift to a clean energy economy, as well as actions to address extreme weather and other climate change impacts, this rule will provide investors with the vital information they need to protect our financial futures. I applaud the Commission for addressing major gaps in corporate transparency and fulfilling its mission to protect investors.

Although the rule addresses many climate risk transparency problems, it is not strong enough on one in particular: requirements for disclosure of emissions from clients, customers, and suppliers (Scope 3 emissions). While the draft rule likely would require some companies to disclose these emissions, many others would be able to evade key disclosures that investors want and need. The final rule MUST establish a clear Scope 3 disclosure requirement for all large public companies, and require that the accuracy of these disclosures be independently verified. Investors should not be left in the dark about this important source of climate risk.

I look forward to the SEC's continued efforts to provide transparency regarding the threats that climate change poses to the savings of investors across our economy.

3,028 of these signers, you might also notice, added their own additional personal comments. If there are any questions about this statement or our positions on this matter do not hesitate to contact us.

Sincerely,

Ben Cushing

A climate risk disclosure is an important step for investors and the population as a whole to know what damages may occur or will occur because of polluting industries.

Knowing what the risks are is an important facet of the investment process and it a smart decision to hold corporations and businesses accountable by implementing rules that make them give full disclosure of climate risks.
Turn the proposal into an action.

A lot of people don't believe in climate change but it is real all you have to do is look it up on YouTube or Google the facts about climate change and you will see specifically exactly what's going on with our climate and with this planet. We don't have anywhere else to live you children grandchildren and great-grandchildren I don't know how they're going to live they're going to end up having to wear a hazmat suit every day just to go outside. That's how bad I think it's going to be one of these days. People don't take things seriously until it's too late. And when it's too late there's nothing that can be done to change it. We still have time to make a big difference. People are already having to leave their homes wherever they are because it's so dry no rain no food again no rain no food. The air quality get so bad and the water is so bad it's killing our sea creatures. So many animals are going extinct. All we want people to do is to care and do something about it. Please care.

A major financial regulator, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), has proposed a new rule requiring companies to disclose their climate risks that, once finalized, will be a critical step forward for the millions of Americans with retirement funds and savings plans who want to know how the companies they invest in will impact climate change. Investors have been understandably concerned that the climate commitments made by many corporations are not reliable, and they lack the information they need to compare companies and make informed investment decisions. The public deserves to know whether those companies will remain profitable and resilient in an economy that is transitioning to clean energy. Let's make sure the SEC follows through with this disclosure rule.

A rule that requires historical data showing the evolution of a corporation's investments and returns shifting away from environmentally harmful activities and practices to less harmful ones. An energy company, for example, should show the winding down of its fossil fuel segments and the development of its green energy investments, products and distribution projects.

All 7+ billion of us humans need to be accountable. The Paris agreement gave us all a goal to reach by such and such date. The companies who supply us with all the goods and services we need daily are also an important part of those numbers.
If a company is not doing its part to reach the lowered goal, they must change their way of doing business. The old way of getting in there and taking what you want to sell are gone if that getting it will require more hidden costs and negative impacts. We only have one Earth. If we reach what scientists call the tipping point or point of no return, we may be in for a downhill ride we do not want to take, as an individual, as a society, and as our economy.

Although the agency's proposal is generally strong, it unfortunately allows many companies to decide whether to disclose the emissions emitted by their clients, customers and suppliers. Americans must be provided the information necessary to exercise their investment choices in a manner that will steer our future toward a healthy and habitable planet, not just the immediate financial returns that the capital market recognizes and rewards. The continued profitability of fossil fuel companies is incompatible with a habitable Planet Earth, and any entity or person or entity that invests in coal, oil, or gas companies is therefore placing a financial wager upon the destruction of Planet Earth. Such grossly immoral behavior by a company is incompatible with the values of many of their would-be shareholders, were this information generally available. The first and foremost interest of all human beings is in a habitable planet, without which no amount of money is relevant.

The proposed a new rule to require companies to disclose their climate risks is an important step forward for the millions of us Americans who want to know how corporations could impact the climate crisis and what they are doing to mitigate the problem. Make the rule as strong as possible so lip-service won't be enough. As a mother and a grandmother, I am very concerned for the health and viability of the planet our children and future generations will inherit. We have a duty to our communities, families and most importantly, children to ensure their safety and well being through environmentally sound and sustainable policies, including clean air, water, addressing climate change, etc. That duty will always be more important than politics or profit.

As a mother and grandmother, I'd like to leave our environment better than we found it for future generations - and that certainly is not the case! Corporations must be held responsible for their actions that negatively impact our climate!

As a mother of young children and taxpaying, working citizen, it is frustrating to know that corporations are insulated and allowed to lie to consumers regarding sustainable practices. Offsets are little more than smoke in mirrors. Corporations along with individuals must aggressively work to reduce their carbon footprint (stop burning fossil fuels). If corporations chose to be ignorant of the current climate collapse and global energy, favoring their short term profits and green, well then they better be honest and transparent about it and let consumers make their educated choices. Our children deserve a safe and stable future, yet the world they are inheriting cannot help but continue to destabilize due to the continued human destruction. Please require close monitoring, transparency, and reporting to consumers regarding this critical issue. It is life-or-death for many. Please stop insulating corporations. They are not people.

As a native of South West Missouri, I and many others in my area have experienced the fallout of corporate green washing, lack of responsibilities, and lack of disclosures. Many communities in Missouri have been permanently damaged and their environment altered by poorly regulated mining operations and clean-up that was barely adequate. Requiring companies to disclose ahead of time their impacts, risks, and procedures would help prevent other communities from ending up in the same boat. Likewise, it should not be permissible business practice that companies can evade commitments due to lack of requirement to disclose proofs, results, etc.

As an investor, and a citizen of the world, I want to know what corporations are doing about climate change and how they are working or not working too slow it. This is such a huge problem and will be the deciding factor in all of our futures. If we don't move quickly in the direction to reduce climate effects of large corporations especially, the future of society as we know it is doomed. It's easy for a company to say they're using solar power for their electricity, but if a bank is still lending money for drilling oil and supporting fossil fuels around the world, what good does that do So it is essential that we require them to disclose what their customers are doing as well as what the companies themselves are doing.

As someone investing in my child's future I have been concerned about the practices of companies I am investing in. It is a crucial step that companies be held accountable to their practices. We are on a precipice of making decisions that massively impact how we are caring for this world. These companies have a huge impact. Please make sure shareholders have the transparency needed to invest in a future that leads to a healthy planet.

As those reading this know, the planet is in a state of peril right now, brought on largely by unbridled human activity such as fossil fuel extraction. Corporations need to be held accountable. As we all know, climate change and global warming is adversely affecting our economy. It is substantially contributing to our current inflation due to limits on goods and food due to extreme climate events. In the Southwest, we are experiencing a mega-drought. This is affecting water supplies in the Colorado River Basin and water available for both domestic and agricultural use. as an investor, I think it is imperative that the companies I invest in disclose their climate risks accurately. We must not let them mislead investors like myself with green-washing. Thank you for making these regulations effective to protect investors through accurate corporate disclosures about climate risk.

As we in Connecticut face two days of 90+ degree temperatures (May 21 and 22), the terrible impact of climate change, which has been evident for years, gets worse and more visible. It is absolutely imperative that companies disclose their climate risks. For financial and ethical reasons, investors need to know if companies' actions match their promises. If companies planned to be transparent in the absence of a strong requirement to disclose these risks, including emissions risks, they would be doing that now, but they aren't. A strong rule is essential to protecting investors.

Because corporations can donate unlimited amounts of money to buy politicians who pass the laws that then benefit the corporations, they are systematically destroying our planet. The oceans, rivers, and lakes are suffering from pollution, overfishing, and the effects of Climate Change. Mountaintop removal destroys wildlife habitat, and water supply and the economy of the surrounding communities - while simultaneously destroying it's peace and beauty. The list goes on and on! Cigarette companies knew for decades that their products were harming people. They did everything they could legal and illegal to hide that fact and cast doubt on the science confirming it. From long before child labor was outlawed to Amazons almost slave labor warehouse conditions and union busting today, companies and their owners have put profit over people. The steady reduction of regulations has allowed multibillionaires to grow at the expense of the earth and humanity. You CAN have profits and growth without doing harm. Ben and Jerrys did alright. You just cannot have the enormous profits the greedy are going for today. Capitalism flourished even with regulation for decades after the Great Depression. Unbridled greed is killing us all now. Faster than we ever thought. Greed needs to be regulated. This little provision for climate disclosure will help us in one small way to keep companies accountable but still allows profits. climate change is real and is moving in the direction (rapidly) of having an atmosphere which is not fit to breathe and is poisonous and will suffocate us -- just like the planet Venus whose hydrogenous atmosphere is (or would be if we were there) fatal to organisms such as those of earth. all science proves this terrible possibility for Earth.

Climate change, like numerous other issues (gun safety, immigration reform, prison reform, education reform, short-term lending regulation, healthcare reform, banking regulation, opioid regulation) remains a vexing problem primarily due to corporations' ability to curry favor with elected officials. The corrupting influence of money in our political system is undermining our democratic traditions and discouraging Americans from voting and/or running for office. This ominous development may well end our experiment in representative democracy unless we alter this decades-long trend. For the sake of the republic, we must amend the US Constitution to state that corporations are not people (and do not have constitutional rights) and money is not speech (and thus can be regulated by state and/or federal campaign finance laws). Short of accomplishing this, no other reform of significance will be achieved.

remedied well unless the Army Corps of Engineers projects get the same degree of scrutiny that is proposed for industry, and same rules for disclosure. The Corps does industrial works but its records are largely hidden, especially ones involving risks to less powerful communities like Lower Ninth Ward in New Orleans where the IHNC Canal Lock Project is still pursued despite the harms it has caused already without accountability. There will not be industrial accountability without accountability for the Corps of Engineers that has so much power and does so much to the environment on behalf of industry.

Corporate poultry and meat packers make outrageous green claims on LinkedIn and Facebook. When they are challenged, the comments disappear and the marketing hype remains. It gives the public a false sense that they are helping the environment by buying a certain product. The poultry industry is very good at this, shifting blame to their producers instead of corporate processors.

We have more coastline here than in California or Florida. It is easier in coastal communities to see the direct effects of mis-handled waste, commercial run-off & other environmental hazards when you can no longer fish, drink or play in unsafe lakes, rivers & estuaries; as is already the case here in most places.

Disclosure of climate risks should be mandatory. The annual reports from companies will tout their positive efforts and frame them as making a difference. This is typical PR and doesn't present a total picture to investors. There is no way to judge whether the company's efforts are anything but window dressing without full disclosure of the climate risks.

Disclosures by companies and their suppliers & major clients regarding their climate risks and potentially damages to the environment is an important first step toward managing the impacts on the environment and people as well as elucidating some of the potential risks & benefits that investors and insurers require to properly manage their own future. As the uncertainty of the risks grows due to more rapidly evolving climate conditions, we need stronger rules and regulations for timely, complete, and accurate information & disclosures concerning climate impacts. Without this information, we may well be investing in the wrong companies, or creating outcomes that we do not desire.

Do corporations claim to assure their shareholders and the banks they borrow from that they are responsible citizens doing their part to protect fellow citizens and consumers from watching their tax dollars wasted on subsidies and avoidable mitigation of climate change effects for which these corporations are responsible YOU BET THEY DO. Greenwashed ads and other forms of lying is how. Its cheaper than telling the truth.

Designated as good citizens by the 2010 passage of the Citizens United act enables them to use bloated campaign contributions and fleets of lobbyists to avoid backing up their claims in truth. I want to thank the SEC for interrupting their usual business of trading lies for profit with its ruling proposal. Please, do NOT fold as they come at you with political pressure to rescind reasonable assurances of transparency needed by all stakeholders. posses a threat to our financial

As a consumer, I'm not part of the corporate machine. I have no idea, really, what's happening in boardrooms and factories everywhere. BUT, labeling products to show their impact - both BEFORE public consumption and AFTER - would, I believe, have a huge effect on consumer spending and our planet.

For too long, corporations have hidden their environmental impacts and misled the public about their ability to play a role in stopping the climate crisis, a process better known as greenwashing. The SEC should require corporations to publicly disclose their climate impacts -- most notably their greenhouse gas emissions -- and how climate change will affect their business. This is a common sense disclosure rule which should be required. Once investors obtain accurate information about which companies are aiming to adjust to a clean energy future and which are not, most investors will choose the sustainable ones.

Fossil fuel companies have been dragging their feet for years on doing anything for climate change. Whatever happened to initiatives like BP's maybe 25 years ago to buy solar capacity and move with the times to avoid having a business crisis A strong new rule will go a long way toward fixing this. From northwest wildfires to unprecedentedly strong storms, it is clear that our current models are poor predictors of future outcomes. From old uncapped oil wells spewing methane gas to flaring of natural gas from fracking of new oil wells the fossil fuel industry is a major polluter and contributes to climate change on a massive scale. Given how much faster climate change is coming than was originally thought, it is imperative that there be clarity and truth about all aspects relative to corporations/companies emission profiles/risks (e.g. emissions emitted by their clients, customers and suppliers) so investors (of which I am one) can be informed in a meaningful way, and not be hoodwnked by greenwashing.

Greetings, Securities & Exchange Commission. I am so GRATEFUL to hear of the new rule to REQUIRE CLIMATE RISKS be stated up front BYcorporations. They have often NOT disclosed this in the past & the consequences have been devastating for People, Animals, Plants, the limited FRESH Waters and Lands. Please DO HOLD COMPANIES/CORPORATIONS ACCOUNTABLE. It matters to those, especially Native Nations and the Rural/Urban Poor, who often have these corporations polluting their air, water, land and food, & often have the least amount of cultural capital, as well as actual capital to fight these seemingly impervious giants. I urge you to STRENGTHEN this draft rule, not just for the current generation, but for the Seven Generations that follow. Guess what, climate change is happening. It doesn't really matter the cause. Republicans want to do nothing because it might reduce profits. Sensible people want to take all reasonable measures to minimize the undeniably bad impacts of our changing climate. History tells that corporations will not act in the interest of public responsibility unless forced to do so, and that they will often claim to be responsible with no real action behind those claims. Look no further than the plastics industry and tobacco companies for evidence. The climate crisis is the most compelling reason to force worldwide corporate entities to disclose their real impacts on the planet and, as a result, to be induced to change their environmental footprints.

How great it would have been had the SEC and other important entities considered this subject when climate change was first recognized as an issue - 1970's! However, it is an absolute MUST DO now and many of us believe public-planetary health to be one in the same and THE priority of the near and far future! Since profits are what many corporations worship over all and pay millions to NOT comply with what is right, they must be overseen and made to account!

I am most excited to see that we are getting companies to be clear and consistent about their Scope 1 and 2 emissions and requiring this disclosure. I understand it will take some effort for companies to adopt this reporting and there may be some controversy around the requirement.
It will be key for SEC to stand its ground on that rule so consumers and certainty about the role each company has in producing or reducing greenhouse gas emissions. I

Scope 3 reporting and reference that in this letter.

I commend the SEC for proposing this action to require corporations to disclose the effects their activities can have on the future of our climate, our people and our environment. Corporations have long help the upper hand with influence over our agencies and political decisions, all at great detriment to the planet. I do not understand nor will I ever accept any excuse, as to why fossil fuel industries are allowed to deceive the general public about how their industry harms our climate. Cigarettes must contain warnings; alcohol must contain warnings; prescription drugs must contain warnings; power tools contain warnings; small objects contain choking hazard warnings; bleach and other chemicals contain warnings; fossil fuels directly impact our climate, which in turn impacts every single individual on this planet yet fossil fuel giants are allowed to lie. This is wrong. Plain and simple WRONG!!!

I dont want want to invest my money in companies without knowing their financial risks from climate change. This is especially true for all insurance companies and companies in areas at risk due to sea level rise, fires, and flooding. These companies should be legally required to disclose their financial risks due to global warming.

I have been wanting this information ever since I realized that a relatively few companies (in the big picture) were happily destroying this planet as a habitable place for people to live, for the sake of their profits. Maybe it is that the individuals can hide behind the company/corporate name that they can do something so heinous. It is essentially committing murder from afar, like the destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, but on a much larger scale. Guess these companies cannot be charged with war crimes, but at least held up for public scrutiny and shaming, and consequent financial losses. At least they have an out - change their ways!

I have committed my retirement investments to be in SEG category funds. It is an ethical commitment that is more important to me than the highest yield funds. I expect the SEC to commit to their responsibility to hold companies responsible for honest disclosure of their low-carbon commitments. The SEC needs to be what it was designed to be -- an agency to protect citizens/investors from the worst ills of capitalism and to hold companies responsible for their actions. If the SEC fails to do this, we will not be able to survive the climate disaster facing us. In other words, what the SEC does matters.

I have long wanted to invest my money, not only to create a financial cushion for my future, but also to support companies that I believe in, however, I personally have not invested my money in any company due to the lack of transparency as to the environmental impact their businesses have. If this transparency was required from all corporations, then I would happily give my money to those who show themselves to be worthy of support. The industrial scum which pollutes the earth at the expense of every living thing in the entire world does not deserve my money or support- and every consumer deserves to know what they are investing in.

I have refrained from putting my income into retirement fund accounts exactly because corporations do not make it clear if they will sink the money into polluting development like fossil fuels. I became dizzy, lethargic, my hair fell out, bloody nose, heart palpitations, itchy burning skin, eyes burn, and so much more. You cant see it so you dont know whats happening to you. I could go on and on with what my community suffered and continues to have symptoms and of course growing number of cancers, and deadly diseases.

If the air isnt breathable and we dont have clean water and food. Were dead. Even you rich folks and decision makers will suffer. Unless youre moving to the moon.

Please!!! Do something before it is too late. Which is pretty soon unless we are very aggressive in policies and rules we make for the rich companies who do not want to make a change. You know theyre rich and powerful enough to change if they wanted to. Lets not let them do the same old, same old.

I hope the SEC passes new disclosure rules. The need is obvious and overwhelming for companies to be transparent with the public, and with their stockholders about their plans to help or to worsen our proven global climate dangers. These energy companies must be required to be responsible, and sadly, they won't do so on their own. Please make strict laws and rules to promote the public interest and the health of the worldwide community through rule of LAW. Protect our ability to KNOW what these companies are actually doing, which affects us in so many ways. As citizens, lovers of the outdoors, and as financial investors and customers of these companies, we deserve the truth. They must be strongly regulated in our dangerous times. We need our government agencies, like the SEC, to be strong for the good of all. I support the SEC's steps towards addressing major gaps in corporate transparency related to disclosure of data related to climate change impacts. The new draft rule for climate risk disclosure is a critical step in fulfilling its mandate to protect investors and capital markets, however it is not comprehensive enough considering the extremely negative corporate impacts on our shared environment. I turn off lights when leaving a room, do not let the water run when brushing my teeth and don't spray chemicals when there are weeds in the garden. These are just a drop in the bucket to the energy wasted by corporations. I would like to know which companies are being careful our energy, so I can invest in them. I used to volunteer at Chaco Canyon, which is in the middle of a heavily fracked area, so I've seen firsthand what climate risks it poses and how little is done to mitigate them. This needs to stop if we're ever to get control over the damage we're doing to our climate.

I, and I think most Americans, want to know the true effect of a company's actions on climate change and the environment. We need to stop loopholes that allow companies to hide their effects through Greenwashing. If ever the old advice to "follow the money" made sense, it's in relation to corporate actions to confront the climate disruption that is already taking lives and homes from people right here in the US, and around the world. We need to know whether the money that we, and institutional investors, and investment firms, and others are investing in corporations - and the money we spend on the products and services we buy from those corporations - is being used to actually reduce carbon and methane pollution, or contributing to the continued acceleration of climate-damaging pollutants. Without transparency, corporations' "business as usual" behavior will negate all the other efforts being made.

If I commit a crime, mislead the government on information I am required to report, I am held personally responsible...and I should be. If corporate commits a crime, presents misleading information or no information at all, the company lawyers work tirelessly to avoid any repercussions. And even if a court should find the company guilty, not one person is held responsible. The company may pay a small affordable fine and be told to clean up their act, but no one person feels the pinch. There is no personal pain or responsibility. And the company can mislead it's stockholders all it wants. Pretty good scam, if you ask me.

I'm a mechanical engineer who has worked in energy efficiency and have seen first hand the greenwashing by companies big and small. This amounts to nothing less than socially accepted fraud. You need to do everything within your power to strengthen commitment and create transparency. Responsibility is often shirked by taking suppliers at their flimsy word of sustainability with no proof whatsoever, and looking the other way even when the claims are clearly unbelievable. This is especially all too easy for suppliers used abroad who aren't subject to our environmental laws and regulations. Just take a look at the organic cotton industry for example. This sort of thing is happening pervasively throughout our supply chains. I wonder if false advertising laws would be a way to help combat these issues to some degree, but whatever the means you have at the SEC, I ask you to use with full force.

I'm not a stockholders or investor in clean energy, but as a life form, I and all the people and creatures that breathe air DESERVE to have clean air, and which companies are saying one thing, but doing another. It's an unspoken right. Too many corporations find ways to skirt the laws now, and have attorneys by the hundreds to make sure they breach every loophole possible. Our climate is changing at an alarming rate because of the use of fossil fuels, and with the changes include shorter lifespans from respiratory illnesses, some of which aren't reversible or curable. In not requiring companies to disclose their climate risks, you are allowing companies to commit fraud, yes fraud, on the American people. Indeed on any being that breathes air. You are the Securities and Exchange Commission - you exist to prevent fraud.
Make this disclosure rule required...not something companies can, by their own volition, opt into. Be bold. Now is the time for bold. It seems whenever another issue monopolizes the headlines (inflation, guns, etc.) our climate crisis gets pushed too far down the To-Do List. It's time and hopefully not too late, to put the world, our country over money and power. It's too bad that it seems too many of our elected officials care more about getting re-elected and getting big donations from companies that expect to be catered to at the expense of humanity. Millions of Americans with retirement funds and savings plans, like me, want to know how the companies in which we are invested will impact climate change. To what extent are they causing Global Warming or preventing it The public deserves to know whether those companies will remain profitable and resilient in an economy that is transitioning to clean energy.

In the long term, "Greenwashing" will not help investors or the environment. Please hold corporations accountable for making and following through on their climate commitments and resilience plans.

Misinformation - i.e. lying about actions while taking credit for false promises - is one of the most destructive forces in the US today. It is used to bypass, policies, procedures, laws, and ethical expectations throughout business and the government.

The SEC is one of the last places to rein in such wholesale corruption and abuse in business and government.

Please hold the line - ethical norms matter. People will have lives destroyed and even die as the climate changes. This is not a public relations game - we have islands already being inundated, extreme hurricanes, tornados and wild fired destroy almost every area of the country. The SEC can make a difference by holding business to reasonable standards of behavior and reporting.

My husband and I are both civil service retirees. On a personal financial level, we rely on prudent investment of our pensions to provide adequate income to live. We deserve to know if our pension systems are investing in high risk assets that may earn below-market returns due to climate risk. On a personal survival level, we also deserve to know if corporations are contributing to climate change through high GHG emissions, thus violating the Paris climate accord. We have a daughter who may not survive 3 degrees of warming predicted for her lifetime. Antonio Guterres recently remarked that empty pledges from businesses have put us on track for an unlivable world. Corporate accountability is essential to stop the bad actions of polluting corporations who greenwash their climate destroying practices and put profits over community and planetary health. We expect our government to protect all life on the planet from climate harms with every available means.

Other business need to be part of the solution too - the Securities and Exchange Commission can help make that happen with the climate risk disclosure rule. No one keeps a secret for your benefit. They keep it for their benefit. When it comes to matters that affect the health, welfare and existence of all life on earth; there can be no secrets. The idea that proprietary matter is more important than what is necessary to life is ludicrous. When money comes before life; society is doomed, at the very least. At the worst, life is doomed.
Think of someone objecting to disclosure as someone having something to hide. That should make it very easy to make a law that prohibits that action. "I plead the fifth," has never meant that someone was innocent.

On to the ability of a related issue, the SEC should not have made it more difficult for small investors to put forward for stockholders to vote on at annual meetings. These proxy votes are key to the ability of ordinary investors to express displeasure (other than voting "no" on nominees for director) and to demand that corporations behave in a socially responsible manner. Proxy materials should be required to include statements on both sides of these resolutions, rather than just the directors recommendation to reject all such proposals.

Our country has had too much misinformation. I support this essential tool--the Securities and Exchange Commission's new draft rule for climate risk disclosure--for increasing investors' and the public's awareness of and the costs of climate-related risks. Stop allowing corporations to put their thumbs on the scales and misrepresent how well they are living up to their alleged commitments to fighting climate change. We need the data that will make it possible to shift our economy to one that stops pouring money into the pockets of corporations that say one thing and do another.

Our planet continues to get warmer, and consequences of global warming will continue to cause more problems, including melting of glaciers and rising seas (poor Miami homeowners and drivers!) killing off species as climates change around them, more severe storms and droughts and resulting damage, and I would guess, more conflicts caused by resulting scarcities and competition for survival. Please strengthen the new draft rule on climate risk disclosure to ensure a level field across all companies. A weak or imbalanced application will not provide the transparency needed and could actually give some companies more cover to their greenwashing if they can claim they are abiding by a climate rule which still allows them to mislead about their carbon emissions.

1836. Julie Cutter

1839. Steve Perakis
steveperakis@gmail.com
Columbus, OH 43229
Please strengthen, not weaken, this draft rule. Although the proposal is generally strong, it, unfortunately, allows many companies to decide whether to disclose the emissions emitted by their clients, customers and suppliers. For banks and other key industry sectors, these so-called value chain emissions represent the majority of their emissions. Investors have been asking for this information for far too long and have every right to know about these major sources of climate risk.

Smaller investors, and those with retirement investments in the stock market want insight in to how companies conduct their business with regard to climate change consequences. And studies show, huge numbers of ordinary people are being adversely affected by climate change brought about by the conduct of businesses disregarding the impact their operations have on the environment. It is inevitable that companies will need to change. Investors need to have insight into what companies are strategizing for these changes, so they have the insight to factor this into our investment strategies.

I never thought of it until I started reading more about banks and their political politics....ie as to whom banks donate money to when it is election time critical. Many, many banks donat big money to candidates that are climate deniers. I personally would rather do my banking with a banking institution that prefers to donate to candidates that understand the total scoped of clients control. Being in Florida, most banks are with the Republican candidates. This makes me uneasy in that they are using my money for those that I wouldn't vote for.

The bulk of my personal investments are within my IRA. These investments have to have a long-term view and if climate risk has a potential effect on the sustainability of these investments, I want to know. It is not ethical to avoid disclosing known risks. Even those which might have a lower probability now, can change with climate change - climate change effects act as a multiplier for the negative impact for some of the risks.

The principles of free market capitalism presuppose market buyers (and investors) have accurate information about relevant factors to their buying decisions. Otherwise, predatory markets reign with commerce and capital as prey or perpetrators of fraud and the dominant logic being the maximization of deception, not the maximization of value. Especially for buyers but also capital investors, determining the climate impacts of investing in the operations of one company vs. its competitors is currently onerously difficult to reach an apples-to-apples comparison vital to effective market competition serving the public & national interest. That the Pentagon regards climate change as a primary national security threat shows that climate impacts present violent and lethal consequences which, for any non-psychopath, demand greater assurance of transparency and reliability in corporate disclosures. Removing room for spin and misinformation is therefore vital to uphold the SEC's purpose.

The SEC has a rare chance to stop corporate greenwashing. Some corporations have made environmental pledges that are unreliable, or incomplete. If companies can opt to not disclose emission emitted by their suppliers, clients and customers, then that companies true carbon foot print is unknown. The SEC has an obligation to set a clear, consistent standard for climate-related risks that allows all investors to better evaluate and compare them. The SEC rule for climate disclosures is an excellent example of using the power of the government to address the climate crisis. Investors need to become more knowledgeable about corporations actual commitments to reducing GHG emissions. Right now, there are only promises without factual disclosures. The specificity on this rule needs to be examined by climate watchdogs and groups with track records for being pedantic to an annoying amount. If it pisses off the Army Corp. of Engineering, apply the same standards. Rigorous vetting of claims by corporations is the only acceptable path forward, with extensive closure of loopholes and retroactive penalties for companies exploiting any gaps.

The times they are a changing and there is a new reality to humanity's perception of the future. The degree to which we are battering the Earth we are also battering the human psyche. And unfortunately the status quo has become a disorder. Every aspect of traditional planning and methods of operation absolutely need to be revisited - not just for us but for our children and theirs. Not one tree should be cut, not one plot of land bulldozed, not one new oil well created without first stepping back and looking at the situation through lenses focused on the future and survival of the human species. There is too much a tendency for corporations to ignore the climate risks we face and stick their head in is, "we'll address it next year", "let the line and our competitive position" or even "it's not us". We are headed for a big crash in so many areas [water for people and crops, crop failures, storms, flooding, fires, etc.] that it's frightening. While all these impacts

This is a baby step that desperately needs doing, if we ever want to walk back from the ledge we're on from Climate Change (what a metaphor!). I'm still horrified at how much we will likely lose in the next 20 -30 years due to ocean acidification, melting ice caps, changing wind patterns, and incredible spontaneous wildfires. But! Let's start somewhere. Please. Unrelated to this, but still direly important- can it be noted that I have a very favorable view of Nuclear fission as the best, stable, flexible, green energy we (presently) have. Arguably, hydro could be better if done understanding ecological impacts, but there are obvious limitations in use cases. The more money we can put into nuclear, the better the hope for the future.

This is a tough BUT ESSENTIAL reality to face for corporations AND investors. The risks are great- especially for those of us who have invested a large chunk of our life savings who also have limited income. We must be protected- and corporations have to evolve- the only way to evolve is to be honest and transparent about climate risk- which must include emissions from suppliers, customers and clients. No corporation, large or small- but especially large scale operations, should be able to slip through the cracks. If there is a loophole, they will use it.
Grateful to the SEC for the steps already taken.

This issue matters to me because I would like to know how the companies that I and others invest in are reliable and care about all aspects regarding emissions and how they are being disclosed to the SEC. The public deserves to know which companies are transitioning to clean energy without being lied to by polluting companies and lobbyists who are distorting or covering up the truth to the SEC about emissions disclosures. Companies and lobbyists must disclose their climate risks.

In our state, we have twin enemies to the environment and human wellbeing - New Mexico is in a megadrought unlike any in the past 1,200 years - please read that again so you see the magnitude of loss to our water supply, our vegetation and our livelihoods. Also, we are experiencing the largest and most destructive wildfires in the state's history. AT THE HEART OF OUR PROBLEM is the fossil fuel industry - pumping methane into our atmosphere and draining our scarce water by the millions of gallons for every frack. So, we have to get off fossil fuels - transition fast or cold turkey. Time to pull the plug on financing and subsidizing and kowtowing to big oil.

To whom it may concern,
I am pleading with you to please make stricter regulation standards and enforce them. It take individuals, advocacy groups, scientists, and corporations, both big and small, working together to make a difference. This issue matters to me, because I intend on majoring in environmental science or environmental law after completing this current degree in biology. I want a better, safer, and cleaner world for the future generations. We only have one planet, which God has so graciously given us, along with His only Son, so we must cherish the water, air, and land that we have now. With increasing pollution caused by corporations and greed, humans and animals are suffering. Please put an end to these preventable health issues AND help consumers make smarter purchases by requiring companies to disclose their climate risks. When we know these risks, we can choose not to support those companies and buy from more sustainable, eco-conscious businesses instead. Thank you!

Transparency builds trust.
Conversely, secrecy breeds distrust, and we the public have had so many great reasons to distrust corporations for externalizing suffering and privatizing all gains, which is especially egregious when our corrupt elected officials subsidize already profitable corporations with our taxpayer dollars.
Transparency is the bare minimum expectation that we should have. Corporations business model, in many cases, is rooted in deception and fraud. We need someone who looks out for the interests of the largely uninformed public, as they own all the major media who disseminate THEIR perspective without holding them accountable.

Transparency is the cornerstone of full disclosure of risk. Climate change is perhaps the greatest risk of this time in human history. We are witnessing how human actions are changing the environment in powerful, perhaps irreparable ways. Some entities are even capitalizing on this while others are taking responsible efforts to both reduce impact and retain revenue. With impending legislation to create a carbon market, investors deserve a clear picture of the true environmental impact their investments are generating so we can modify our positions accordingly.

We are at a crossroads where we must decide if we want to live on a habitable, nourishing biodiverse planet or on a poisoned wasteland. Corporate greed and economies that depend on voracious resource extraction are robbing our children of a future that is filled with promise and instead ensuring them a bleak, toxic existence. We must take action to hold corporations accountable for their responsibility for climate degradation. This rule is a start.

Wealth and power are addictive, acting on the brain in ways identical to that of cocaine (please see Nova: Mind Over Money for an introduction to the science behind this statement). This little-recognized truth lies behind the drive for financial deregulation that has dominated policy in the US for 40 years, and led to increasing economic irresponsibility, recessions and crashes. It has also created the greatest wealth gap in the history of the developed world. What most people do not realize is that widening wealth gaps often lead to civil wars. (Please read How Civil Wars Start and How to Stop Them by Barbara F. Walter, one of the world's leading experts on contemporary civil war). In a country that has more guns than people (a standing the USA shares with no other country, ever) civil war becomes even more likely, longer and more deadly.

Rapid re-regulation may avert this disaster. Please do it!

When a company makes money in the United States, I would think it would be reasonable for that company to want the United States to continue as a successful and healthy nation so that the company could be the same and grow. Every business should do all that is needed to improve and keep the environment in peak condition. Transparency is, simply put, honesty. WHEN, WHEN, WHEN is this country ever going to put the needs of its people and planet over the need of corporations for profit. Said corporations bellyache about the importance of capitalism, so they should welcome the weeding out of bad investments that strong regulations may accomplish when investors, consumers, etc, decide that some corporations are not worth the investing due to their environmental destruction. Wildfires, the resulting terrible air quality, heat waves, loss of homes, drought...these are all real impacts that are happening to me and millions of other Californians. The cost of climate chaos is already in the billions every year. I DO NOT want to have my money invested in anything that exacerbates the climate crisis.

With all the rhetoric of being transparent and doing what is good (and needed) for our planet, companies should be honest with their data. They will gain more positive reviews if they are honest

With climate change already causing serious damage to our country through wildfires, flooding, drought and oversized hurricanes, it is critical that all sectors of society make every effort to mitigate their contributions to global warming and develop sensible plans for adjusting to a changing climate. This includes corporations, which have moral and fiscal responsibilities to their employees, customers and shareholders.

You either believe science or you don't. (HINT: you absolutely believe in science because you use a phone and computer and trust your life to cars regulations, etc etc etc). And the science over the last half century could not be more clear: burning fossil fuels has become a literal existential crisis for billions of people and countless other living beings across the planet and over the coming century and beyond. It is literally insane, arguably even a crime against humanity and all life on earth, to
