

An Unusual Year for Environmental Policy

One word best sums up the 2018 environmental legislative year: Weird.

Weird in that there was an unusual convergence of events that influenced environmental policy outcomes, but that didn't really have anything to do with environmental policy.

The year began with three empty legislative seats, all a direct or indirect result of serious sexual harassment complaints that marked the end of 2017 and helped launched the national #MeToo movement. Another seat would empty before the end of February in 2018.

In March, a new Senate President Pro Tem, Toni Atkins, was seated, replacing Sen. Kevin de León who would be termed out in December and had decided to challenge U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein for her seat.

Atkins' speech to the Senate upon her appointment signaled that she was determined to help change the culture of the legislature to help make it a safe place for people to work. Atkins also indicated she hoped to help calm the decades-long rivalry between the Senate and the Assembly that too often reached levels that blocked solutions to the state's pressing problems.

Policy Battles

Then the policy battles began. And they were weird, too. First, Senate Bill 827, the well-meaning but radically over-reaching bill that proposed to increase needed housing density by throwing out environmental review and local control, failed in its first committee. The bill united Sierra Club California with social justice, affordable housing, environmental justice and labor allies.

A number of other bills that aimed to weaken CEQA mostly went by the wayside after some effective efforts by Sierra Club California staff and others. This was not so much weird as par for the course.

Two identical bills, Senate Bill 834 and Assembly Bill 1775, were introduced early in the session after the federal government said it would entertain proposals to expand oil drilling in federal waters off the coast of California. Both bills would impose hurdles to prevent new oil drilling.

Despite oil industry opposition, proponents of the bills (including Sierra Club California) managed to get them through both houses and to the governor's desk, where they were signed. The weirdness here was that a similar bill failed in 2017. The Trump Administration's announcement of plans to expand drilling gave the issue new life.

Meanwhile, a reasonable bill, Assembly Bill 3146, which would have simply required operators to test oil and gas wells near homes to determine the presence of pollutants that could impact health fell short of enough votes to get it off the Assembly floor.

Governor's Quirky Approach Leads to "C" Average

This is the last Sierra Club California report card in which Governor Jerry Brown's performance on environmental bills will be assessed. He'll be termed out after the November election, and we'll have a new governor to monitor.

Brown has been, as one magazine headline noted in March, "as combative and contradictory as ever."

He has also been quirky. That quirkiness has shown through in his positions on significant environmental bills over the last 8 legislative sessions.

For instance, this governor has consistently condemned the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), the law that is the foundation of public transparency about large construction projects. He has suggested and supported bills that weaken CEQA and rejected bills that would make CEQA work better for the environment.

This year, we included on our report card a bill by Assemblymember Eloise Gómez Reyes, Assembly Bill 2447, that would have improved the ability of residents of low-income communities to participate in the environmental review process. The governor vetoed it.

The governor is also no fan of timber harvest plans. Those plans are essentially the CEQA for managing private forests.

As part of Senate Bill 901, the legislation designed to address utility company liability for wildfires, Brown's closest staff negotiated with the logging industry new exemptions from timber harvest planning and other important oversight to protect natural resources like water and soil. We opposed Senate Bill 901 because of this.

Some of the administration's bill actions didn't happen on the signing desk. Senate Bill 1316, by Senator Steve Glazer, would have resolved a longstanding dispute about environmentally significant lands owned by the State Parks Division of Off Highway Motor Vehicle Recreation. The bill made it through one house and to the Assembly Appropriations Committee where it stopped after the governor's parks system leadership expressed opposition.

To his great credit, the governor signed Senate Bill 100, the 100 percent clean energy bill.

Governor Brown has been strongest on environmental issues that can be answered via technology. He is less inclined to effectively resolve environmental issues that technology can't solve. That may be the foundation of his quirky approach to environmental policy.

This year, of the 10 bills on our report card that made it to his desk, the governor took what we regard as a pro-environment position 7 times. He failed us thrice. That gives him a 70 percent record on this report card.

In classroom terms, that's a C.

Strong lobbying by the oil and gas industry prevailed.

Unfinished Business

In the category of unfinished business, Senate Bill 100, designed to put California on the road to have a 100 percent carbon-free energy grid by 2045, suddenly came back to life. The bill hit a wall last year in the Assembly in the last days of the legislative session when a labor lobbyist declared opposition because some undefined deal fell through.

The bill began to fly through the legislature.

In May, the union lobbyist withdrew opposition. The bill began to fly through the legislature. A huge coalition of activists, including Sierra Club activists, pressed for votes until the bill passed in the Assembly and again on concurrence in the Senate. This time Assemblymember Lorena Gonzalez Fletcher, the floor jockey for the bill, and Speaker Anthony Rendon helped do some heavy lifting to get this important environmental bill across the line.

In the final weeks, the drive to figure out how to respond to the climate-change-driven increase in fires around the state, and liability, resulted in a large bill, Senate Bill 901, that included provisions that allowed the logging and biomass incineration industries to avoid certain regulations or market realities. We opposed Senate Bill 901.

All the other bills on our report card this year are bills that we supported. They range from CEQA to water issues. The report card bills reflect just a small percentage of the bills that Sierra Club California tracked and weighed in on this year.

2018 Bill Summaries

Sierra Club California policy advocates select the bills that appear on the report card. The selection is based on factors that include a bill's overall importance to the state's environmental quality, the precedent it sets for good or bad impacts, and the bill's importance to fulfilling the Club's mission. We also consider what a bill's score reveals about environmental commitment in the legislature. This year, we scored 11 bills in the Assembly and 10 bills in the Senate.

When a bill returned to its house of origin for a concurrence vote, we used that vote. Exceptions are Senate Bill 834 and Assembly Bill 1775. We counted those votes in the opposite house as cast during the last two weeks of the session. By then, both bills were identical.

Assembly Bill 1184 (Ting)

Allows San Francisco to go to the ballot with a Transportation Network Company (e.g. Uber and Lyft) tax next year.

SUPPORT: Signed.

Assembly Bill 1775 (Muratsuchi and Limón)

Blocks new offshore oil drilling in federal waters off the California coast. SUPPORT: Signed.

Assembly Bill 2447 (Reyes)

Ensures that residents of disadvantaged communities have meaningful opportunities to participate in the environmental review process. SUPPORT: Vetoed.

Assembly Bill 2534 (Limón)

Creates a fund to provide public access to the beach at Hollister Ranch, where landowners have previously blocked access. Also creates a grant program to help underserved communities access state parks. SUPPORT: Vetoed.

Assembly Bill 2975 (Friedman)

Expands the protections of the state wild and scenic rivers system to include any California river that the Trump Administration decides to remove from the national wild and scenic river designation. SUPPORT: Signed.

Assembly Bill 3146 (Holden)

Requires operators to test oil and gas wells in close proximity to populated areas to determine the presence of pollutants that could impact the health of local residents. SUPPORT:

Failed on Assembly floor.

Senate Bill 100 (De León)

Raises the renewable portfolio standard to 60% by 2030 and sets a target of 100% clean energy by 2045 for electricity generation. SUPPORT: Signed.

Senate Bill 120 (Roth)

Requires further review of the Cadiz water project, which would mine Mojave Desert groundwater, drying up desert springs and harming wildlife. SUPPORT: Held in Senate.

Senate Bill 834 (Jackson)

Blocks new offshore oil drilling in federal waters off the California coast. SUPPORT: Signed.

Senate Bill 901 (Dodd)

Addresses a range of issues associated with wildfires and wild-fire liability. Removes oversight of certain logging activities. OPPOSE: Signed.

Senate Bill 998 (Dodd)

Requires water companies to have an accessible and understandable policy on water shutoffs and limits their use to protect access to drinking water. SUPPORT: Signed.

Senate Bill 1316 (Glazer)

Would have allowed the sale of a particularly biodiverse park owned by the state's off-road vehicle park division to a public entity for conservation purposes. SUPPORT: Passed in Senate; held in Assembly Appropriations Committee.

Senate Bill 1335 (Allen)

Phases out single-use plastic food packaging at state facilities reducing the amount of litter-prone material spoiling our beaches and parks. SUPPORT: Signed.

 E Excused absence
 Scores are based on the number of “+” and “NV+” votes cast versus the total number of possible votes (excused absences do not count against a score, but NV- votes do).

NV- Legislator was present, but chose not to cast a vote in support of a pro-environment bill
 NV+ Legislator was present, but chose not to cast a vote on an anti-environment bill
 n/a Legislator had not yet been elected during the vote
