WATER CONSERVATION AT HOME
– By Ina Topper, Environmental Education Chair

Yes, we’re doing quite a bit to conserve water already. We’ve taught our kids not to let the faucet run when brushing teeth, we use a bit of water to first do the ‘soaping’ when washing our hands, and only run the faucet when rinsing. But have you thought of filling the sink with some water, and then rinsing your hands in this little ‘pond’? It uses still less water than rinsing under a running faucet. (Of course, within reason. Not with truly filthy hands, but just think how often do we wash hands while cooking.)

Talking about kitchen work, both my mom and grandmother washed and rinsed all their vegetables on a daily basis over a small bucket or plastic bowl in the sink. These multiple bowls of water would be used to water the plants around the house and on the porch. I can’t remember a single time either of them filled a container straight from the faucet JUST to water plants. In rural areas water had to come from afar, and yes, sometimes there was a shortage, in addition to the much higher water bills compared to here.

By the way, at our recent general Sierra meeting we happily auctioned off our first rain barrel! This barrel's content can water sizeable lawns or flower beds all year round.

Many of us have pets, and we generally refresh their water bowls once or twice a day. So how about using the old water to quickly water some plants, or rinse the kitchen sink? A little confession - if I hadn’t used this strategy for years already, rest assured many houseplants would have died. So yes, there was an ulterior motive besides water conservation.

Moreover, when showering, only let the water run half strength. And a bathtub only needs to be filled one-third in order to get clean. Very few of us get outright dirty like in the old days, working on the land or on the docks. Nowadays we’re mostly just very sticky, or sweaty rather. And if you need that extra refreshing touch while in the tub, try a few drops of some cooling bubble-liquids added to the water - the scent of watermelon or kiwi comes to mind.

For pool owners, instead of just letting the water out when the rains are too frequent and fill the pool too high, take a bucket and scoop out water to clean your patio, instead of using a hose. I assure you, one too many times hosing down my patio did increase my water bill quite a bit.

Need we say one more time the obvious... the toilet flush of course. If you’re not yet the lucky owner of a new low-flush commode, put a brick in the tank. Or just don’t flush during the night for the ‘smaller stuff’; your housemates will also be grateful while they’re fast asleep.

Some future, perhaps idealistic, dreams... Wouldn’t it be nice if, besides giving credit for installing low-flush commodes, our city leader would also credit us for lower strength overhead shower heads? Even MORE futuristic, although it’s being discussed, how about a dual water supply in every household: one with (our own) recycled household water, still clean enough for scrubbing floors after only a onetime use for showering. But perhaps I’m dreaming too much. Or perhaps we need bigger incentives.

In this regard I’d like to point out the incremental billing system already in place in some areas of our county. [In Pembroke Pines, for instance, residential users pay a surcharge for consumption which exceeds 70% of the user’s average monthly consumption. -Ed.] We’d all be surprised how drastically our water usage would dwindle, in the shortest possible time. See <http://www.dep.state.fl.us/Drought/tips.htm> “Fifty tips for saving water.”

Broward Sierra Programs

Wednesday, July 2nd: Saving Florida’s Nature Coast, presented by Joe Murphy, the Florida Program Coordinator for the Gulf Restoration Network. Florida’s Nature Coast stretches along the Gulf Coast from the northern Tampa Bay region to the Wakulla County region. It is comprised of rich and productive coastal marshes and estuaries and fed by some of Florida’s wildest rivers, is teeming with wildlife, and is still mostly undeveloped. Large scale development projects are planned which would place this last long stretch of undeveloped Florida coastline in peril. Threats to the regional rivers imperil coastal ecosystems that are critical to the life cycles of many Gulf species. Learn more about what you can do to protect this amazing place, and how you can get involved in GRN’s Save The Nature Coast Campaign!

The meeting and program will be held at the Anne Kolb Nature Center on Sheridan St. in Hollywood (see map on next page).

Tuesday, August 5th at Fern Forest: Potluck dinner. See “Notes from the Chair” on page 2 for further details.

Wednesday, Sept. 3rd: After committee reports, we will be participating in the Sea Turtle program at Anne Kolb Nature Center. Pre-registering will be required to participate in the turtle program. See page 3 for more info.

NOTES FROM THE CHAIR – By Barbara Curtis, Broward Sierra Chair

Eleven of us had a great time on the Waste-To-Energy tour of the trash burning facility in Davie on May 23rd. We learned that the plant incinerates a good portion of the acceptable trash from the county’s garbage, and sells the resulting power to FPL. It powers its own facility, plus generates enough electricity to power 60 homes. We had a fun lunch together after the tour. (Please note the Sierra Club’s policy on toxics/factsheets/incineration.asp - Ed.)

On May 24th a group of 18 went kayaking at West Lake. Our return paddle was quite choppy, so we all got a good workout. Everyone did great, and we had a delicious sushi lunch on Hollywood Beach. Thank you Patricia Widener for leading the two wonderful outings.

I hope you all join me on my summer walks! [See outings on next page.]

POTLUCK DINNER

We will be having a Potluck Dinner at our General Meeting on Tuesday, August 5th at Fern Forest. Join us to meet and talk with other environmentally concerned folks, and enjoy some delicious healthy food. Please bring a dish to share. Bring some salad if your last name starts with A-J; main dishes, K-S; and desserts, T-Z. See you there.

IT’S BABY SEASON – By Roberta SilverShaw, Critter Tales

Baby season is here again! Well, in Florida, it’s almost year round! So here are some reminders of what to do if you find a baby bird:

• Don’t assume that it needs your help. It may be fine. If it has feathers and appears healthy, it is probably on the ground so that it can learn to fly. Most baby birds must be on the ground for several days to learn how to fly. During this time they are fed and protected by their parents.

• If it is too small to be out of the nest but appears healthy, you can put it back in the nest, or put it in a small basket and hang it from the same or a nearby tree. The parents will care for it in this new nest. Watch from inside your home for the parents to return and care for the baby.

• If a baby bird is sick or injured, it needs care right away. Please call for help:

   Local Emergency Numbers:
   Rascals Wildlife Network - 954-779-0364
   Sawgrass Nature Center - 954-752-7732
   S.P.C.A. Wildlife Care Center - 954-524-4302

Wildlife hospitals raise hundreds of babies every year, but it is better if the parents raise them. They will NOT reject their baby if someone has handled it.

DIAL #DEP TO REPORT ENVIRONMENTAL CRIMES

Floridians now have a new tool for protecting the state’s natural resources. The Florida Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) recently announced that most cell phone customers in Florida can dial #DEP to report environmental crimes, including illegal dumping of hazardous materials, construction debris, oil drums and biological waste. “#DEP helps officers respond quickly and efficiently to environmental crimes and emergencies,” said DEP Division of Law Enforcement Director Henry Barnet. “DEP’s law enforcement will now have additional eyes on the roadways and in the field to help spot and easily report major crimes against the environment.”

#DEP is an emergency line for reporting environmental crimes only. State Warning Point staff will answer calls and forward information to DEP law enforcement personnel or emergency responders for investigation. DEP’s Bureau of Environmental Investigations conducted almost 350 criminal investigations in 2007, resulting in 133 arrests. Callers without cell phones can also report environmental crimes to the Environmental Crimes Hotline at the State Warning Point by calling 877-272-8335 or 877-2-SAVE-FL. General environmental inquiries should be directed to DEP district offices during business hours (561-681-6600 or 800-774-5866). For more information on DEP’s Division of Law Enforcement, visit <www.dep.state.fl.us/law/Environmental_crimes.htm
