Berkshire Power Pleads Guilty

Berkshire Power has agreed to plead guilty, and pay a settlement of $8.5 million, to violating Clean Air Act regulations.

This power plant may not be an ExxonMobil-sized fossil fuel giant, but it is still big enough to be deceived the public and denied the truth. She states that this action is only the tip of the iceberg, and that ExxonMobil has known for decades that burning its own fossil fuels is literally killing us while only selling us a false narrative of a clean, white future.

Utilities are Shortchanging our Energy

As early as the 1970s if climate harm was reported and yet Manipulation of the emissions monitoring equipment was the rule. The operators of Berkshire Power in Agawam Massachusetts, have manipulated the emissions monitoring equipment.

The legislation had already been underway, creating uncertainty for more than a year to take this action as early as the spring of 2011, employees at Berkshire Power have agreed to plead guilty, and pay a settlement of $8.5 million, to violating Clean Air Act regulations.

This power plant may not be an ExxonMobil-sized fossil fuel giant, but it is still big enough to be deceived the public and denied the truth.

Massachusetts Bans Polystyrene

There are now 14 communities with bans on polystyrene in Massachusetts. We are working hard to get more communities into the ban train. The Cosmopolitan is working to make sure that our pharmacy ban on polystyrene balloons is passed. It is very important for us to work with businesses, especially those who might be hesitant, to make sure that polystyrene is banned in our communities.
