Election results | TPP is not in our interest | Are the Koch brothers driving Mass. solar policy?

Fossil fuel interests receive massive government subsidies, despite their destruction of our environment and the hijacking of our political process. We must push back and push forward, fast. For what we do today is already determined. We have the wheel in our hands. History is unfolding. Let's do what we can, starting today. Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made.

ACTION

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

TPP. President Obama may sign this treaty as early as February 4th. While most of the discussions have focused on U.S. trade with China, the Pacific Rim countries (from Japan to Chile), and others around the world, the TPP trade agreement (and a similar agreement called the TISA) would expand the role of corporations and limit the ability of the United States (and other involved countries) to regulate commerce. We cannot allow any trade agreement to undermine our democracy and the public's right to know. Now is the time to take action.

ACTION

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.

Many events in 2015 that address climate change were heartening, from the Papal Encyclical to the Paris climate accords. Now we must take that momentum and ensure that our elected leaders follow through on the commitments they made. We do this by continuing to call our elected leaders and urge them to support a ban of the Import of Tar Sands Crude.